Born in New Haven, Connecticut, Don Matthew spent his formative years in charming New England, where his first encounter with the physics of light came by accident. One day, as he was cleaning paint brushes in a darkened garage, light falling through a crack projected an image onto the wall turning the room into a giant camera obscura. At age twelve Don worked as a freelance photographer for local newspapers, shooting social events and conflagrations. While at the Art Institute of Chicago, Don developed an interest in film. Then at the University of Arizona at Tucson he studied master prints and negatives in the collection of the Center for Creative Photography. Don joined the celebrated Colossal Pictures in San Francisco as camera operator and worked on staff for the next several years. Since 1994 Smith has been lighting & shooting national spots for a wide range of clients and agencies.
