

HERBERT DAVIS

Director Of Photography

IATSE local #600

The amalgam of the technical and the aesthetic is the hallmark of this craft, and with the inheritance of a father's engineering skills and a mother's artistic traits, it was only natural that Cinematography would become Herb Davis' chosen path. Herb's high school hobby of Photography led to a college film production course and any other pursuit became out of the question. During post graduate work, Herb shot film for a PBS Television station. This led to an internship on a feature film and he began working his way up the levels of the camera department. Herb studied and absorbed how numerous accomplished D.P.'s approached their work. Learning from many different photographic styles as well as the interaction with an array of talented Directors engendered a commitment to learning something new every day. As a D.P., Herb recently completed the rare feat of shooting over 300 episodes of a hit network drama - Grey's Anatomy, where he experienced the shift from shooting film to digital and working with a wide array of top Television Directors. Having chosen to move on while the show was still a hit, Herb looks forward to new cinematic endeavors and challenges.
