

ADAM J. SANCHEZ, C.A.S.

Production Sound Mixer

Member IATSE 52

Adam Sanchez has been Mixing Sound in some capacity since 1997 when he got his hands on reel to reel recording equipment in college. Following stints as a projectionist, a bouncer, a live Sound Mixer and Studio Engineer, it wasn't until he stepped foot on a film set for the first time that he found his niche. Proud to have worked his way up through the business from the bottom up, he's had wonderful opportunities to work alongside hands on directors such as Woody Allen, Alejandro Iñárritu, J.C. Chandor, David Frankel and Tom McCarthy. Over the last twenty years, Adam has proven himself both highly capable skilled technician and sensitive to the creative processes at hand. Adam is most at home when he has the opportunity to actively work alongside Cinematographers, Actors and Directors with an open and collective mindset. Adam is a self-reliant, experienced and skilled artisan that can identify problems and provide solutions. In his free time, Adam enjoys learning – whether it's emerging new technologies, learning new culinary skills or studying foreign languages – most recently Mandarin. Bilingual and Cuban American, Adam is based in New York. He is an avid traveler and motorcyclist and enjoys traveling for work.
