

BRETT MURRAY, C.A.S.

Production Sound Mixer

Member IATSE 479

Brett Murray sparked his interest in Sound at a young age, as a musician. In ninth grade at his Alabama school he headed the sound department as the youngest student ever to hold that role. He handled mixing for student films, live music and theatrical productions. During his junior year in high school Brett left to work on his first feature film "Under Siege" where he met veteran Sound Mixer Scott Smith and cemented his enthusiasm for feature film Production Sound. After high school Brett learned Sound Utility under Mixer Whit Norris. While he continued studying in his Sound pursuits, he moved to Los Angeles in 1996 and then relocating to his current residence in New Orleans in 2003. His projects include documentaries, comedy and drama features, from big budgets to small. Having transitioned from early technology to today's advanced tech, Brett's over twenty years' experience quickly overcomes sound challenges and he delivers outstanding tracks. He works closely with Directors to understand and convey their creative style and vision and capture the best of actor performances. Brett works with acclaimed Directors including Lisa Joy, Kevin Smith, Mike Flanagan, James Mangold and Jordan Peele to name a few. Brett recently moved from New Orleans to Atlanta and is always happy to travel.
